

ThinkHigher..... where are you all?!

We hope you are all well and safe and getting used to the new normal and the challenges it presents. Following the advice from Public Health England - and to avoid lots of last minutes changes to plans while we try to keep up to date - we have postponed all our events for the next month or so. We didn't really want to do this, because we had some incredible trips and activities arranged, which we know ThinkHigher students would have loved. We all had a mixture of feelings such as disappointment that the great stuff we were looking forward to couldn't go ahead, confusion from all the quickly changing messages and sad that we weren't going to see you all for a little while. However... we have had some conversations in the team, with some ThinkHigher students, with parents and families in your communities, with your schools and have come up with some wonderful ways we can keep in touch, provide support for each other and do a little learning along the way.

So, now we have lots of new and exciting outreach activities coming online so we are all a safe distance apart and don't even need the daily commute to school.

We have a plan for the next few weeks and this includes podcasts, challenges, competitions, question and answer sessions, career journeys, recommended books and films and lots more. BUT, we still need your help. Follow us on socials, give us a wave so we know you are there and help us to get better at helping you. We now have live streamed theatre productions from the west end, stories from celebrities, tours of zoos and museums, virtual rollercoasters at Disney and plenty more. This is a really exciting time to see the world from the comfort of your sofa. This way of learning and working is all a bit new to everyone, including us, but we haven't gone anywhere.

Now, who is up for the toilet roll keepy-uppy challenge; you have Josh's 12 to beat!
